A Horse's Big Win.
The toughest two miles that any horse in New Haven ever covered, fell to the lot of a big bay yesterday morning as a result of his own induction. It was two miles straight away across the lake, from the end of Long Wharf to the East Haven shore. That is a long swim for anything of the horse family, unless perhaps the hippopotamus, and the remarkable performance was watched by hundreds of people, who cheered loudly at his successful conclusion. The animal belonged to Frederick Clark, a farmer, and was one of a handsome pair worth over $300. They were harnessed to a heavy truck, and their driver, Lloyd, was taking them down to the end of Long Wharf to get a load of merchandise. Near the shore end of the wharf the bit of the off horse was broken, and the animal, which was a fine specimen of his kind, made along the wharf at a mad gallop. Dozens of loaded wagons were standing in the way, and the excitement was such that the men on the teams, who expected their own horses to join in the race and suffer by collision with the other's, were not prepared to make the scene exceedingly lively.

Driver Woods hung to the reins and either by his judgment or good luck, he steered his team clear of everything. He hoped that they would stop at the end of the wharf, but they gave no sign of doing so. In fact, and just at the last moment he jumped. He struck on his feet and was not hurt, but the team, without checking their speed for an instant, dashed clear off the wharf and disappeared in fifteen feet of water. There was no sign of the truck or the horse, both of which a minute the animal had caused the truck to come to the surface and utterly clear of the truck and struck out for the other shore, two miles away. Longshore Taylor and his two black hands from the steamer Elm City jumped into a row-boat and pursued the swimmer. They overtook him after a chase of about three hundred feet, but dared not go near him for fear that he would upset the boat. There was nothing to do but to follow along and render assistance if it became possible.

Meanwhile John Angus, with a fast team, started around the shore to meet the horse if he ever reached the other bank. Angus carried blankets and a couple of chairs to revive the horse, which would naturally be much exhausted after his swim. The horse, watched by a great crowd, swam steadily through the deep water and showed little signs of weariness. But about a quarter of a mile from the shore he struck shoal water and a muddy bottom. Here he floundered and seemed likely to drown. Taylor and his companions in the boat came to the rescue, however, and after a hard struggle in which the little craft was more than once in danger of being swamped, the uniting of the two by this time repeated, was helped over the shoals.

A few rods further ahead he struck some mud and floundered, about till at last he turned over on his back. It was a delicate operation to right him, for his hoofs beat the water into foam, but Taylor and his companions were equal to the task, and the bay was once more set "on an even keel."

Near the shore there is a ledge with slippery, sloping sides, and here the bay got into trouble again. He tried to get a footing but slid off and sank in the deep water. Again he was rescued and started toward the shore. Fortunately but a narrow strip of water now lay before the tired animal, and in a few minutes he struck hard bottom and walked ashore, while a great cheer went up from the crowd.

Angus was ready to meet him with a warm blanket and the drinks. The former was accepted with dumb thanks, but the drinks were respectfully though firmly declined. The horse was at first excited over the eyes and his injuries were not serious.—New Haven News.

Back to Her Side.
An old, dilapidated private schooner or cutter was coming through the harbor, through the December wind, bound westward. As it came nearer in its slow course across the plain lake the horses were thin and the rough board beneath the faded and torn canvas cover, was as bare as the sky.

He had once been a good looking man, but his head was bent and his eyes were dim. He was the story of sorrow and disappointment. "How far is it to the next town?" he asked as he came opposite to me. "About five miles," I replied. "How is the road? Can get there before night?" "I am afraid not, without hurrying."

The clouds were skimming across the sky and a storm seemed riding on the back of the north wind that blew fiercely over the prairie. "Guess I'll go on, though," he ejaculated after having considered a moment. Then he fixed a broken strap of the harness with some cord he drew from the wagon box. "What's your hurry? Where are you bound for?" "I'm going to Smith county," he replied, wearily, as he thought of the long trip, almost to the foot of the Rockies. "I must get there before the first of the month."

BREAKFAST PICTURES.
Two Views of What the Day's First Meal Should Be.
The Richardson are well to do people who live up town near Madison avenue. They give elegant dinners and receptions, but their everyday table is, to say the least, queer. I know, for I was their invited guest one week and sugar. I have never seen so much oranges and sugar since. But the breakfast especially had a lasting impression on my mind, and I have not been able to get it out of my mind. Even the desire to be polite could not induce me to eat a minute. Then there were not much of a slice of bread, one slice of the one over slice of bread. "Frank," said the man, reprovingly, "leave one piece for Hannah."

"Why," said Frank, "can't I have all the bread I want?" But he couldn't, and, like myself, went hungry to church. This is a fact, not fiction. I have seen breakfast if the meal that suffers most from lack of variety, and many a wife sigh for the continental roll and coffee in place of the substantial meal that costs an enormous amount of money.

Mrs. Plummer, a charming young married woman, told me with tears in her eyes, that Tom had spoken his first cross word to her—Tom, who had been so kind and cheerful and the honeymoon was dimmed and life was dreary. Tom had said that the breakfast might as well not be married. Tom was heartless, but his wife did a brave and good thing. She determined to make a study of breakfast and rise above the level of a boarding house keeper. So we talked it over and together made a few purchases.

The next morning when Tom came down to breakfast the table presented an inviting appearance. It was covered with a pretty red cloth. At each place was a fruit plate, covered with a red napkin, and finger bowl. On one side of the plate lay a pear and a spoon, on the other the white napkin, knife, fork, salt bottle and butter plate. In the centre of the table was a bowl of Newtoun pippins, grapes and bananas. Tom looked pleased. He was soon in the middle of a crisp, mellow apple, giving small pieces delicately pared to his wife.

"How do you eat these things?" said Tom, holding up a grape fruit as big as a baby's head. "Cut through the middle, across the sections and give me one half," Tom did so. "Now look," said Mrs. Plummer, dexterously moved the pulp with a spoon into the saucer.

"You must not get a seed or any of the white part of the rind into your mouth. There are very bitter," continued Mrs. Plummer. "We will have raw apples and grape fruit or oranges every morning, Tom."

The grape fruit is a compromise between a lemon and orange and deserves to be a universal favorite. Tom liked it. After cleaning his fingers and wiping them on the red cloth, the fruit dish, apple parings and all were removed. Tom took up his morning paper to hide the frown of disgust which the thought of half a rotten oatmeal had evoked. The girl entered with a dish of "rolled wheat" and a red glass pitcher of cream. "Only the tops of two bottles," exclaimed Mrs. Plummer. "The rest of the milk is just for the cows."

This was the way Mrs. Plummer prepared her wheat. A baked bean pot, as it was called, had been purchased on the previous day. At 10 in the afternoon she put cups of wheat mixed with one teaspoon of salt and a quart and a pint of boiling water into this pot. Without covering or stirring it was placed in a hot oven and baked several hours. It was then taken out and allowed to cool. In the morning after the fire was made it was put back into the oven till wanted for breakfast. Then, steaming hot, it was lifted in solid pounds of sweet, tender kernels, crowned with two inches of starch or jelly into the dish for the table.

"This is the nicest stuff I ever ate," said Tom as he passed his saucer for the third time. "Really, Milly, I don't want much more to eat," added he. "Don't ever feed me upon oatmeal again; it's a plebeian dish beside this."

"And so cheap, too," murmured Milly; "only two and a half cents for all this." The last course of the breakfast was a small rolled omelet, cooked for one minute on the griddle in the fat of bacon. Four eggs well whipped, a little salt and one-third of a cup of milk composed this dish, which would have been a less savory cooked in the usual way as a large, fat omelet. Tom ate his breakfast in a happy mood, and bit of bread and butter, drank his coffee, then gave straight to Milly, took her in his arms, kissed her, and said: "I'm sorry I was cross to you yesterday. You are to be a first class housekeeper, and the dearest little thing."

A Fact
WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Fresh confirmation of this statement is to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatism, Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alternative.

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatism, gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. It pleased me to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."
"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite used one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-purifier I know of."—L. W. Ward, St., Woodland, Texas.

FRIDAY, JULY 4, 1890.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Friday Excursions.
The steamer Elia Ross has commenced her Friday excursions. Today she carries an excursion from Napanee to Massena and Belleville and return.

Steamer Hero. Capt. W. Bloqufield, has commenced her daily trips between Belleville and Kingston. She leaves Deseronto for Kingston at 7:30 a. m., on Monday, Wednesday and Friday; and at 4:30 a. m. on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Entrance Examinations.
The High School entrance examinations
for the year, having commenced yesterday, Principal Knight is supervising for the Department of Education. There are 39 candidates writing, 28 of whom are from Deseronto and 11 from rural schools.

Close Connections.
There is a general demand heretofore
for a closer connection at Napanee between the Grand Trunk mixed train east in the morning and the K. N. & W. train going north from Napanee for York, Harrow, Smith, etc., what say the railway men to this complaint of the public?

Casualty.
On Monday Robert Kenney, a young lad working in the Cedar Mill, had his leg caught in a conveyor belt and dragged around a pulley. He was released from his perilous position by Mr. Bick and Messrs. D. Newton examined him critically, and found that he had been badly bruised
on bones were broken.

Fire Extinguisher.
The Rathbun Company on Monday received three hundred of the Worcestershire Fire Extinguishers, from the Worcester Fire Appliance Company, of Worcester, Mass. These pumps, a description of which was given in THE TRIBUNE of June 10th, will be distributed to the various establishments of the Company for better protection against fire.

Methodist Bazaar.
The ladies of the Methodist congregation hold their annual Bazaar today on the vacant lot east of Smith's block, where the large tent of the Napanee district has been pitched for the purpose. The ladies have a large number of fancy and useful articles for sale, and the refreshment stand will be found to be very inviting. A liberal patronage should award their efforts in the good cause.

Sites in Lennox.
The farmers about Napanee are favorably impressed with the virtues of Lennox
and in many parts of the country sites are being constructed. This is believed by all thoughtful farmers who have studied the question to be a step in the right direction. His Honor Judge Wilkinson has been a zealous advocate for the introduction of this system of preserving food for stock, and to him much credit is due for the advance that has been made.

Celebration at Napanee.
The celebration at Napanee on Dominion Day was a great success, and attracted a vast multitude of visitors to that pretty town. Deseronto sent a large delegation.
The trades' procession was creditable to all concerned. Napanee defeated Newburg at base ball. Newburg and Kingston nines commenced to play, but the latter team faked and the umpire awarded the game to the Newburgs. The races were well contested. The thunder storm interfered with the evening part of the programme.

Peterson's Ferry Arbitration.
The arbitrators in the ferry matter between Jacob B. Rathbun and Wm. Powles from Napanee, to Peterson from Deseronto, have published their decision. They grant Rathbun the right of landing on the north shore of the bay providing the same right is given to Powles on the south shore.
Rathbun also by this decision is to pay to the Indian Department $130 arrears and present year's rent and $50 rent each year in future. He is also to pay one-third of the arbitrators' fees, which amount to $365. The arbitrators find also that the sole right of landing property on the Indian reserve is vested in the Indian Department.

The Glorious Twelfth.
On Saturday, July 12th, the members of L. O. L. No. 242, Shannville, will run an excursion on the steamer Elia Ross
from Shannville to Picton and return Shannville at 7 a. m. and calling at Picton. Returning, will leave Picton at 4:30 p. m. For the round trip, 40 cts.
The Twelfth will be observed at Picton with more than ordinary enthusiasm this year, as it is supposed that about twenty persons will be present. In the procedure, Bros. Wm. Wilson, J. S. Kerr, A.
Hill and S. Geddes constitute the committee of Shannville lodge who have this pleasant excursion in charge.

Serious Accident.

Mr. Wm. Stewart, Jr., was the victim of a very serious accident on Sunday, June 29th. With a number of companions
he had sailed over to Grassy Point for a day's outing. Shortly after arrival he attempted to turn a hand-spring, and in doing so a dirk-knife which he wore attached to a belt fell from his sheath to the ground, landing down, and the whole weight of his body coming on the knife its blade penetrated the lower part of his body, causing a painful wound. His companions immediately proceeded to convey him to Deseronto, the wound bleeding profusely all the way. Dr. Vandervoort treated the wound which was found to be of a dangerous character. The young man has suffered a great deal, but we learn that he is not in mortal danger and we trust
he will very soon be about.

Presbytery of Kingston.

Rev. R. J. Craig, M. A., attended the meeting of the Presbytery of Kingston which met in Belleville on Tuesday evening, 1st inst. Rev. Dr. George was appointed Moderator for the next term. A resolution of condolence was passed expressing sympathy with Rev. S. Houston in the loss of his son by drowning. The call from Newcastle to Rev. W. Allan, of Newburg, was sustained. The various standing committees for the ensuing year were appointed.
Rev. J. Craig is Convener of the Committee on Temperance. Rev. Jas. Rattray was appointed to the Home Mission Committee. It was decided to secure suitable premises for a new Mission building in the neighborhood of Pine and Division streets, Kingston.

The Electric Storm.

On Tuesday evening about 6 o'clock an electric storm set in, and continued with some intermissions until 4 a. m. The lightning was very vivid and the rolls of thunder impressive. There were many heavy showers of rain. In this vicinity little damage was done though several persons were slightly affected by the lightning. The storm was more violent elsewhere in Harrow and also in Prince Edward and much damage is reported. A large number of trees were uprooted and great damage resulted to crops and fruit. Many persons were struck by the electric fluid and temporarily prostrated. A Campbellford great destruction was caused, half-tonnes falling and breaking glass. Culverts were washed out and the roofs of Henderson's foundry
and the Woolen Company's mill blown off.
In Deseronto and the other towns the telephone and telegraph systems were greatly demoralized by the storm.

The election in Barrow-in-Furness, En-

DECEIVING THE EYES.

OPTICAL ILLUSIONS THAT STARTLE
THE BEHOLDER.

The Looming Mirage and Fata Morgana—Optical Illusions in the Heavens with Great Distances—Fata Morgana—Mirages—Houses, as well as human beings
and animals, appear in like exaggerated
shape.

This wonderful phenomenon, says J. K.
Bloomfield in the New York Observer, takes several forms, according to the state of the atmosphere, but those most generally seen are the looming mirages of the Fata Morgana.

Looming mirages distant objects show an extravagant increase in vertical height without alteration in breadth. Distant hummocks of ice are thus magnified into immense towers and pinnacles, and a ship is sometimes abnormally drawn out until it appears twelve or thirteen times as high as it is long. Rocks are seen drawn up to ten or twelve times their proper height. Houses, as well as human beings
and animals, appear in like exaggerated
shape.

Another form of mirage is when a ship, or some other object near the water, seems greatly elevated, and a second inverted image meets it from above. Sometimes the proper image of the object is elevated far above the lake or sea, while the second image sharply appears inverted beneath it, the whole surrounded by a sheet of sky, which is mirrored and repeated within it.

In 1821, in the Arctic region, Capt. Scoresby perceived, by the inverted image in the air, the ship Fame, which afterward proved to be seventeen miles beyond the visible horizon of his observation.

Dr. Vince, Aug. 7, 1865, at 6 p. m., saw from Ramsgate, at which place only the tops of Dover castle towers are usually visible, the whole of the castle. It appeared as if though lifted up and bodily placed on the near side of the intervening hill. So perfect was this illusion that the hill itself actually could not be seen through the figure.

Some forms of mirage are lateral as well as vertical, arising from unequal density of two contiguous vertical bodies of air. Thus,
on Lake Geneva, a boat has been seen double,
the two images some distance apart. Persons have been duplicated in the same way. Any one on a hot day, by placing his eye near to a heated wall, may see lateral mirages of objects at a distance, and nearly on a line with the wall.

Here on the shores of Lake Ontario many beautiful and wonderful mirages are witnessed. The lake is so wide the opposite side is not at all visible. And yet during some peculiar states of the atmosphere it is clearly outlined. A gentleman witnessed a most perfect mirage from Sheldon's point, Oswego.
It was about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, when a vessel was seen in the distance, and was given. It extended from a point nearly opposite Oswego city to Cape Vincent, at points on the Jefferson county shore. Whole blocks of the city of Kingston were visible and localities distinctly defined. From Sackett's Harbor to Point Peninsula, ten miles distant, has appeared not more than two or three miles away, and so plainly in view that the limits of trees were visible. Stony island stood out plainly in view, and far beyond it could be seen Gallop and Duck island.
Even the Canadian shore in the vicinity of Long point and Prince Edward's bay was at times plainly in sight.

A vessel has been seen sailing along the horizon with the hull uppermost visible at Lake Bluff. Accompanying the appearance of the ship was that of mountains and hills
as though the Canadian shore was coming into view. A puff of wind apparently caused the whole phantasmagoria to melt away
as if by magic.

In Syracuse, a distant city, a remarkable mirage was witnessed by many persons. It lasted two hours, and was best observed from University hill looking northwest over Onondaga lake. Lake Ontario was plainly seen, and at a distance of at least eight or twenty-five degrees of the horizon, it looked like an ocean. Prof. Comfort says that a few years previous a similar mirage occurred, and it was so distinct that by means of a glass he could discern a town, probably Kingston.

Portions of Rochester and sections of the country lying south of it have been seen out in the lake six and ten times distant, as though the city was standing erect in the air. Trains of the Erie cars and other objects were clearly defined, the aerial phenomena continuing for nearly an hour.

A well-known lake captain has also witnessed a wonderful mirage on Lake Ontario. While on his way from the St. Lawrence up the lake and near the islands known as the False Ducks, and while standing at the wheel of his boat, he saw in the view the city of Oswego, thirty-two miles distant, with the gas-lights in the streets and all the appearances of a town lighted up would present
a halo in the immediate vicinity at night.
The light-house at Oswego, as well as others
on the lake shore below as far as Sackett's Harbor, were seen in the same way. The city, as no building could be seen north of Main street, or any land between the city and the lake.

VALDIMIR THE MONK.

BY SYLVANUS CORB, JR.

CHAPTER IX.

It was early evening ere Zenobia entered the apartment of her young mistress. As she opened the door she found all dark within. She moved into the room, and shading her candle with her hand she gazed about. The wind still howled fearfully through the windows. When the girl had reached the extremity of the place she called her mistress's name, and she was answered by a low groan from the couch on the corner. Zenobia hastened, and there she found her mistress.

"Rosalia!—my mistress!" she cried kneeling down.

"Who is it?" the maiden asked, starting up, and gazing fearfully around.

"It is me, Zenobia, say, my dear, good mistress—what is it? What is the matter? What has happened?"

With a quick movement Rosalia put her attendant away and sat up, and having gazed about her for some moments she murmured:

"Where am I? who is here?"

"It is I. You are in your own chamber. Come—you are cold here."

Without resistance the maiden suffered herself to be led to the place where the heated air came up from the furnace below, and there she sat down.

"What is it?" again asked Zenobia, eagerly.

Rosalia bowed her head with her hands and after some moments of thought she looked up. She was very pale, and a fearful tremor shook her frame.

"Zenobia," she uttered, in a low, strange whisper, "ask me no more now. I am not well. Oh, ask me no more now."

"If it is death," returned the faithful girl, placing one arm about Rosalia's neck, "you know what you may tell me, and what you may not; but whom will you trust if you trust not me? Oh, give me your love, and I can serve you to the end of life."

"I would trust you with my life itself," the maiden returned; "and some time you shall know all that has happened here; but not now—not now. Oh, I can not speak it now!"

"Say no more, my mistress; only let me serve you. You will have some refreshment—something to eat."

"You may bring me some wine, Zenobia."

And thereupon the young girl hastened away.

In the mean time the duke was in his private room below. He was pacing to and fro across the floor with his hands behind him, and his brow was dark and lowering.

Even and anon he would turn to the door and listen, and then proceed. At length there was a rap upon the door, and the duke said, "Enter."

It was a priest who entered the apartment—a small, deformed man, somewhere about fifty years of age. His face was very dark; his features sharp and angular, his eyes dark, and sunken into his head; his brow black, and his hair, where the shaggy brow hung over, but sloping back from thence, leaving the points where phrenologists locate benevolence and veneration deficient and flat. Upon his shoulders he wore a huge, ungainly hump; and in all, he was just such a man as a timid person would shun.

The duke had been the means of getting him into the church, and in consideration thereof he had bound himself to do the duke's evil work. But this is not all.

Some years before there had been a murder in Moscow, and Savatova did the bloody deed. It was a very pure vengeance. Olga had him apprehended, but he was not brought to justice. The duke found him a shrewd, unscrupulous wretch, willing to serve those who would pay him well, and ready to let himself to any one who could save his life. Olga was a man of plots and schemes. He fancied that such a man as Savatova might be of use to him; so he proposed to save him if he would serve him as a benefactor. The villain was glad enough to accept the proposition, and the bargain was made. Could Savatova enter the church, and assume the sacred garb, he might in many cases be of better advantage. The wretch readily assented to this, too; and through Olga's powerful influence he gained a place in the church. He knew that the duke held his very life, and he felt that he could not serve him. His clerical robes shielded him from much suspicion; and, moreover, the place gave him additional advantages to work at his diabolical trade. His salary from the government was sufficient for his support, while an occasional sum from his master enabled him to enjoy any of those luxuries which were denied to most of his brethren. Olga feared not to trust this man, for the fellow had nothing to gain by betrayal, but everything to lose. And such was the man who now entered the duke's private room. He entered with a bold air, for though he was somewhat in the duke's power, yet there was a peculiar satisfaction in knowing that when he felt the noble lord must turn to him, part way, at least. Brethren in crime cannot much upon respect.

"I have come, my lord," the priest said, as he shook the monk from his robe, and then took a seat by the furnace-pipe.

"And how is the count?" asked Olga.

"He is recovering, I am sure."

"Does Kopal say so?"

"Yes. He says he will have him out within a month."

"By heavens, Savatova, this must not be."

"But tell me, my lord, what is the particular need of the count's departing?"

The duke gazed his visitor a few moments in the face, and then he said:

"By heavens, Savatova, this must not be."

ter Galitia for the purpose of carrying out the conspiracy by which the Princess Sophia was to have been placed upon the throne, with Galitia for her prime minister, and himself also high in power. He chose not to tell of this—and so wonder for heads had ere then been taken to pay for such indiscretions.

"And now this count survives I thus have one source cut off. My half of Drotzen is used up and mortgaged to him, but if he dies the whole comes to me. His father and myself married, sisters, and they owned Drotzen, and on his side the Count is the only heir; so in the event of his death the whole comes to me. You understand this now."

"Perfectly," returned the priest. "And 'tis a pity your first effort did not succeed." "So it is," said the duke unhesitatingly. "When I sent him that message to the gun-maker I felt sure he would be slain, and then I hoped that the other could be disposed of for having slain him. But the Emperor has turned all my plans upside down, for the present at least. Savatova, you must have had in Damono's medicine."

"That is easily done, my lord," replied the priest quietly.

"You have free access there?"

"Yes."

"And can you not watch with him some night?"

"I think I can."

"Then do so. When he is dead two hundred ducats are yours."

"Then he dies."

"Good!—And now there is one more. This gun-maker must be got out of the way."

"Ah," uttered Savatova, looking up incredulously. "Do you mean so?"

"Most assuredly I do."

"But why him?"

"You fear to undertake the work?"

"Not at all," returned the priest, "I only wish to know why he was wanted now."

"The reason is simple. I must marry with Rosalia Valda. Her property is worth the whole of Drotzen twice told—over two million of ducats."

"So much?" uttered the priest, opening his eyes with great wonder.

"Yes; it is one of the first estates in Moscow, and it pays her now a yearly income of a hundred thousand ducats. She does not know it—Ha, ha, ha—"

"Ha, ha, ha," laughed the priest in concert. "She don't, eh?"

"No—she knows nothing about it. But I must secure this; and in order to do it I must marry her; and—if I would be so good, that this accursed gun-maker must be out of the way."

"But what is he to her?"

"She loves him."

"And is not your authority—"

"No, Savatova, I'll explain to you in a few words. I'm afraid the Emperor has taken a fancy to this youngster, and if he has he may be appealed to in this case. The girl will take marriage hard. I shall have to hire you to perform the ceremony."

"Which I shall be pleased to do," returned the priest, with a coarse smile.

"You must have the opportunity. But first we must have the young Nevel taken care of."

"I think I can manage that, my lord."

"And how will you do it?"

"I suppose you don't want him put where he can get off and come back here."

"No. Finish him while you are about it."

"I will."

"But mind; it must be done so that in no possible way suspicion can fall upon me. You must contrive some way so that suspicion shall be laid at once to some apparent point and there befall."

"Leave me alone for that, my lord. I can help if I want it."

"Are there not places in the city where a body can be hidden—where it may be so disposed of that never be found?" asked the duke, as he thought came to his mind.

"Never mind," returned the other, with a confident nod of the head. "If I meddle with the matter it shall be well done."

"Very well. I'll trust it with you."

"For a few moments after this there was a brief silence, during which only the moaning of the wind could be heard. But at length the duke started up, and with sudden energy he said:

"Ah, Savatova, there is one thing I came night forgetting. You have heard of this strange monk—Valdimir his name is."

"Ah—yes, I have seen him, too. You mean that huge, fat human fat?"

"Yes. And now tell me who and what he is. He was at the duel; and I know he has been here to my house. Who he is?"

"You've secured me there, my lord, for I can tell you no more about him than I can about the man in the moon. In short no one knows him, save that he is a monk, of some Roman order, and named Valdimir. He has been here for some time, and as near as I can find out, and yet I think I know what his business is, or, at least, why he's here."

"And you suspect?"

"This was my holiest wish, though pride has kept back its utterance. Oh, I feared you would gloat over my death—that you would be glad when I was gone."

"No, no! I should have been a monster then."

"There are many such. And yet I wronged you by the thought. But I could not help it."

"A moment more passed in silence, and then the invalid resumed:

"There is one reason why I should like to live; I should be prepared for a better life. Since death has come—since I have known that he stood over my bed—I have wondered at the evil life I have led; and I have thought that if the dark king would let me remain here a few more years I could be a better man. But 'tis too late now. The deed is cast. Yet I have some joy in this. You have had a happy light upon my dying hour. God bless you!"

Rosalia's feelings were easily moved, and there was something in the deep solemnity of this occasion that started his heart to a tender mood; and the last words of the dying man had the cup. He bowed his head, and covering his eyes with one hand, every petty duel that may be fought, if he saw a spy from home. And besides, I have heard one or two persons say that they were sure they had seen him before."

"Oh that may be the result of some strong resemblance which he bears of some one else. I am sure he was never here before—not in Moscow."

Again the humped-backed priest was cautioned that the work he had in hand, and he had promised over and over again to be very careful, he took his leave.

And Olga, Duke of Tula, was left alone with his own thoughts. Better for him had that wicked priest been his executioner! Better for him had he been upon the count's bed, rocking with pain! Better for him had he been a poor gun-maker, so he had been honest! Oh, better for him had he been the meanest beggar that walked the earth, than what he was! But he did not realize this. He had a goal ahead, and he tried to overlook the black, dreadful goal that yawned between him and it!

CHAPTER X.

The news went out that the Count Conrad Damonooff must die. A few days later the best surgeon in Moscow said he would recover; but now that same surgeon said he must fail. A strange change had come over him. It was not a fever, but rather a consuming of vitality. He was failing fast, and no art of medicine could revive him. Some thought he must be bleeding inwardly, but others knew better than this, because in that case there would be some outward symptom. The wound itself was healing, but the disease was not. The physician and the priest were now in daily, and the former almost in hourly attendance. The surgeon was Kapani; and the priest was the humped-backed Savatova!

Thus lay the count upon his bed, weak and faint, but at present almost free from pain, and an old woman was his only attendant, the priest having just left. It was just after noon. The dying man had just taken a powerful stimulant, and he thought it was against the injunctions of the priest as he said that by such means the invalid might die bereft of sense, and thus lose his hold upon salvation—he had just taken this draught when there was a low rap upon the door. The woman arose to answer the summons. She conveyed with her the girl who had knelt before him, and when she returned to the bed she announced that Kurik Nevel wished to enter.

"Let him come in," whispered the count.

"But—"

"Never mind," he interrupted, as the woman commenced thus to expostulate.

"Let him come in," he said, as he saw his enemy let me see him. It may serve to arouse me."

So the woman went to the door again, and soon afterwards Kurik Nevel entered the apartment. He stepped lightly, noiselessly, to the bedside, but it was some moments ere he could distinguish objects by the sunken light of the place. By and by, however, he overcame the difficulty, and he started back in horror as he beheld the features of his adversary. How pale and ankyrous! How deathlike and ghastly! The count noticed the movement and he noticed the look.

"Count Damonooff," spoke the gun-maker, in low, solemn tones, "a few days since I heard that you were recovering, and I thanked God. But to-day they told you were dying, and I have come to ask that I may take your hand ere you pass away from earth. As God is my Maker and my Judge, I would rather lie down here and die for you than have you pass away with a body of me upon you, or on your lips. Forgive me what I have said, but I never again will I engage in such a wicked work. For my own life it is my country's and my mother's, and I have no right to throw it away; and my antagonist's life is the sacred property of God, which I have no right to touch but in self-defense. Forgive me."

Slowly and heavily moved the dying man over, and then he extended his thin and wasted hand.

"Kurik," he said—and his voice was stronger now, for the potion was working—"I am glad you have come—very glad; for I have wished, about all the while, to see you. I could not send for you, for I knew not how you might come. I have been all wrong in the things that have passed between us. I was mad and a fool. I blame you not; but rather do I thank you for your kindness through all the scene. Oh, I forgive you, you all my heart; and now tell me that I am forgiven!"

"Forgiven!" repeated Kurik, with a trembling lip, still holding the count's hand within both his own. "Oh, would to God I could call you back to life! Forgiven! Oh, God, who reads all hearts, knows how humble, how sacred, is my forgiveness to you! Could I call you back—could I wipe out the past from my memory, I could die content."

"Enough," returned the count, warmly.

"This was my holiest wish, though pride has kept back its utterance. Oh, I feared you would gloat over my death—that you would be glad when I was gone."

"No, no! I should have been a monster then."

"There are many such. And yet I wronged you by the thought. But I could not help it."

"A moment more passed in silence, and then the invalid resumed:

"There is one reason why I should like to live; I should be prepared for a better life. Since death has come—since I have known that he stood over my bed—I have wondered at the evil life I have led; and I have thought that if the dark

SHE HAD REHEARSED HERSELF.

A Plucky Little Woman Who Got Her Name on the Bill.

There is a little actress now playing the part of a woman who is not well known and who will never be known to the public, says the New York Tribune, but she is an example of the plucky American girl who has to make her living and to persevere in her work. The actress was told that she was to play a theatrical manager, who was telling of the rough paths a company has often to tread when on the road. It was in a town out west where the company was to play only one night, and the three of the actresses fell ill. One of them played the leading part, and while the troupe stayed in the town the only one who was under the leading hand had been ill for several days. Toward evening, however, about a message that her physician had insisted on her going to bed. This threw her part to her underling. The manager was thrown into confusion a few minutes later by getting word that two more of the actresses were severely ill, and this left the three principal parts without those who regularly played them, and there was only one understudy.

But a theatrical manager is accustomed to facing hard tasks and she was not at all once set to work to reconstruct for one night his company. A woman who took a minor part in the troupe was called upon to play the role in point of importance. She did not make a success of it, but the manager breathed a sigh of relief when he had satisfied himself that the company could through her lines in a fairly decent fashion.

"Now," he said, having disposed of this line, "let me make some arrangements for this third part."

A little woman who was standing on the stage came forward and said simply: "I would like to play that part."

She was one of those women who are to be found in every play, one who is a lady in everything in one scene, a part of the mob in another, and perhaps one of a garden party in another—one who walks a great deal, changes her gowns many times, but never says anything. She was called upon to play the part the manager was vexed.

"Why," said he, "you have never had a line, have you?"

"Not now," she answered simply.

"You haven't two hours to learn the lines."

"Oh, I know them very well. Won't you rehearse me?"

"Well," said the manager, doubtfully, "I suppose I must. We have got to do something. Come, let's try."

As the quiet little woman with the serious eyes went over the lines a pleased smile spread over the manager's face. He noted his head approvingly as she continued, and she, encouraged by his friendliness, lost her first shyness and ended with a fire and spirit which called forth from the worried manager a hearty cry of applause.

"Good!" he cried. "You do better than Miss M., who is going to take the second part. Ah," he added, a shade of disappointment darkening his face, "if you only knew those lines."

"But I do," she said, delightedly.

"You do? Then rattle them off—just as fast as your tongue can wag."

So they went through those lines, the manager booming and the actress repeating them.

Miss M., glad to be relieved of her responsibility, was rehearsed in the lines of the third part. The curtain was a few minutes later in rising that night, but the plucky and grateful manager who watched a little woman, whose name he had not thought to ask, save the company in so graceful a fashion.

When the actress came down on the last scene he asked her how she happened to know the lines.

"I learned them," she was the happy reply.

"I know all the lines in the play."

"But you rehearsed them so well?"

"Oh, I used to rehearse myself in my room after I had read the lines."

"You rehearsed them so well?" she said, with a proud smile on her face.

The actress whose place she had assumed did not appear on the next night. She had been sent home seriously ill. When the play opened in the next town there was a new name on the program—a name which had never before been seen on any program, and the little woman whose plucky and intelligent had saved the company played that part for the rest of the season.

Old Time of Life.

Two men sat on a bench in Union Square to enjoy rest and merriment, says the New York Sun—on at either end of the bench. One was apparently well fed and well-to-do; the other had apparently staked his all and gone down with the first loss. The minutes no word was spoken. Then the hard-up man ventured the observation:

"Fine day."

The other nodded. About five minutes later he said:

"Folks coming out."

A second nod. The interval was only three minutes this time, when the speaker inquired:

"Think you could cash a check for me?"

A third nod. It was exactly a minute and a half before he continued:

"It would be a great favor."

The other put his hand into his pocket, but he let it remain. The hard-up man went on breathing in an excited manner, but he held himself back for fifty seconds before he said:

"It's a small check—one for a quarter."

The other held a quarter in his fingers and looked up to say: "Might have had it fifteen minutes ago."

"But I was afraid of working you too fast. I've been over in Jersey for three months, and they took all the hustle out of me there. Why, sir, I got so at last that I'd get to a house at midnight and wait for the farmer to get up in the morning to ask him if I might sleep under his straw-stick the coming night. As one sleep they were three weeks sending me to jail for five days, and it took me two days to make up my mind to break out of there. Capt. John Rowe, has been busy with the tug Mounro towing logs from Belleville to Deseronto and back.

Capt. Edward Rowe with the Rescue has been towing from Shannonville, the last tow from that place having arrived here on Tuesday.

As will be seen by an advertisement elsewhere in these columns the work of making the rock cutting for the drain at Willow Marsh, 7th concession of Richmond, will be sold on Monday, July 22nd at 2 p. m. We understand that the sum of $400 has been granted for the undertaking.

The return of Hugh Smith for Frontenac has been protected on the ground that he is not a British subject, and because of bribery and corruption. Protests have also been lodged against the return of Sol. White in Essex and the member elected for North Renfrew. Also against Hon. G. W. Ross.

Messrs. P. Slaven and J. Perry, of Slaven & Co., Napanee, are in town stopping at the O'Connor House, where they are exhibiting samples of carpets, blinds and lace curtains, etc. Residents wishing to see samples should leave word at the O'Connor house and these gentlemen will be happy to give them a call.

Mr. F. H. Sims kindly treated us to a very large slice of rich fruit cake one day last week. It was from a good sized cake which came from Bristol, England, where it was manufactured by his brother, Mr. Frank H. Sims, who is an enterprising baker and confectioner in that famous city. This cake was pronounced very toothsome by all who shared it.

Deseronto Council, R. T. of T.

The following is a list of the various offices in Deseronto Council, R. T. of T.—Bro. R. E. Northmore, S.; S. Sister Mary, V. G. Bro. Wm. Stuart, Chap.; Sister Lily Dingman, R. M.; Bro. T. C. Fraser, Asst. M. S.; Bro. E. W. Taylor, P. E.; Sister Cora, Treas.; Bro. W. Geddis, Herald; Sister Eva Whitte, Dep. Herald; Bro. R. Geddis, Guard; Bro. J. McKinley, Sentinel. These were duly installed into their respective offices by P. C. Bro. Jas. Semetich, who performed the ceremony with due grace on the evening of July 3rd. Several visitors from Napanee County were present on the occasion. This being Miss Dingman's third year in the office of Recording Secretary, she will be entitled to all the honours of Past Councilor.

Terra Cotta Protection for Wooden Buildings

A very interesting and trying test of hard porous terra cotta fire-proofing material was recently made at the Terra Cotta Works, Deseronto. A small building was erected, the frame, roof and floor beams being 2x4 studs. These were lined with matched lumber and roofed with shingles. The walls were lined with one and one-half inch terra cotta tiles which were fastened to the board walls, ceiling and floor with nails and washers. A single coat of plaster was then applied. After drying, three quarters of a cord of pine wood was placed inside almost fire-tight. Upon this was piled a load of two gallons of coal and one gallon of tar, and the mass was then fired. A strong wind was blowing from the west and the flames poured out of the chimney. It burned for two hours before any sign of weakness was shown in the wooden walls, but finally the nails which served to fasten the terra cotta to the outer wall, owing to the insufficient protection of the thin coat of plaster, were loosened and the material dropped off. It was then discovered that where the nails were used to fasten the thin slabs of terra cotta to two coats of plaster should be applied, and secured by this means a complete fire-proof building was made almost proof against fire from within the room or building so protected.

ROADS.

Mr. W. P. Bowen, road commissioner, will sell on Monday, July 22nd, at 10 o'clock a. m. at Kelly's hill, boundary road, the job of macadamizing and graveling a portion of the boundary road south of the slash road.

Building operations
The new house is building on Maple avenue a house 20x28 ft. with kitchen 14x16 ft. Mr. G. E. Clement is the builder. Ground was broken for a residence to be erected by Mr. A. E. Risken on the north side of West Thomas street, west of Mr. Wm. Irvine's residence.

First section meeting.

Mr. K. N. Irvine, registrar, reports the following vital statistics for the town of Deseronto for the six months ending June 30th, 1900: Births 29, marriages 6, deaths 12. It is evident that half of the events are not registered, and the Registrar should proceed at once to prosecute all delinquents.

Notes.

The ladies of the congregation of St. Vincent de Paul will hold their bazaar on Friday, August 1st, on the vacant lot east of the church block. The ladies are making preparations on a very elaborate scale and will have a large assortment of fancy and articles for their patrons. They solicit a liberal patronage on an occasion.

East Hastings Conventions.

The annual meetings of the Liberal Conservative Association of East Hastings which were held at Hamilton on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., was well attended. The old officers were re-elected, namely, Mr. P. R. Daly, President and Mr. Charles Hudson, Secretary. A committee was appointed to forward the objects of the Association.

Local Races.

Local races, open to horses owned in Deseronto and those in training on the track will be held in the Driving Park, on Saturday evening, July 12th. Liberal prizes will be given. Best two in three to harness, half mile heat. Races called at 6:45 P. M. Admission 10 cents. Similar races will be held every Saturday evening during the summer.

Notes.

As complaints have been made that young people are destroying trees on Thomas, Second and other streets by climbing the trees, leaving off limbs, etc., a notice is hereby given that all found damaging trees will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Parents will please give strict attention to this matter if they wish to save themselves from legal expenses.

G. T. R. Double Track.

The culverts and grading between Belleville and Shannonville are finished and ready for ballasting. The rock cutting at Mill town, Shannonville, Kingston Mills and Gananoque have been completed. Over 900 men are employed on the contract at an average of $1.00 per day. The men are paid monthly, and if they present themselves to the local office at any time their money is promptly handed over. These figures are equivalent to $1,250 a day, or $7,500 a week.

Stream Drilling Operations.

Mr. T. Butler reports that the Rathbun Company's logs have come down the Moira and will soon be all sorted and rafted from Belleville. The tail of Gilmore's drive on the Moira River has reached Hawkins' Bay, and the logs are being rafted to the mouth of that stream. All the Rathbun logs are down the Salmon River and have been towed to Deseronto. Mr. Butler never remembers seeing so high a log in the Salmon and Moira rivers at this time of year.

Excursion To-night.

An excursion in aid of the mortgage fund of St. Mark's Church takes place this evening to Davy's Island, Glenora, Lake-on-the-Mountain, etc. The splendid steamer Ella Ross has been engaged. The Citizens' Band will be present and concert will be held on board. A line of great pleasure is expected. Refreshments will be served in unlimited quantities. Good order guaranteed. But, why exaggerate? A liberal and cheap ticket for 25 cents and enjoy the trip. Steamer leaves the dock at 7:30 o'clock.

Disinfectants.

Dr. J. Clarke, of Peterborough, writing to the Review of the town says: "I have answered to enquiries as to the best disinfectant for use during summer I would again say that one of the safest, cheapest and most effective is an ordinary blue stone (sulphate of copper) dissolved in the proportion of two pounds to a pailful of water. This should be freely sprinkled every three or four weeks on the premises, and the water should be around yards and premises will keep down many of those minor varieties of disease which are distinctly due to syphilitic influence as well as these more severe forms which prostrate the system and endanger life."

HIGH SCHOOL ENTRANCE EXAMS.

The results of the high school entrance examinations held at Deseronto are given below. It will be remembered that 39 candidates took part in the examination. Deseronto and 13 from rural schools. The examinations were conducted by Principal Knight of the Deseronto High School. The minimum number of marks to be obtained in order to pass was 357. It will be seen that 18 have passed, 15 from Deseronto and 3 from rural schools.

NOTICE!

Now that warm weather is coming on, we would call the attention of all householders to the great comfort and economy in using Gas Cooking Stoves.

Where gas is used for this purpose the price is largely reduced.

These Gas Stoves are made in All Sizes,
and can be had from $2 and upwards.

All information and prices of stoves can be had at the office of the Gas Works.

THE KATHIBON COMPANY.

Mrs. Allen and Miss Walsh, of Kingston, are the guests of Mrs. Robert Massie, Mill street.

The Council last night voted $50 to the Mechanics' Institute and $50 to the Citizens' Band.

Rev. R. J. Craig has been in attendance this week at the meeting of the Grand Masonic Lodge of Ontario.

A large number of members of Deseronto Lodge, No. 102, I. O. O. F., will attend the grand celebration of the order in Kingston next week.

C. Esauenden, B. A., of Napanee, has been appointed principal of the Peterborough College Institute. This is a serious loss to Napanee.

The unfortunate accident which befell Mrs.
Roach yesterday will probably result in the death of the poor woman. She was struck on the head by a horse. The Chief should run in a few of those parties who throw banana peel
and other garbage on the streets.

Local Races.
The local races in the Driving Park attracted a good crowd. There were two entries, Mr. Gorow's black mare and G.
Stewart's bay mare, both pacers. There was a very nice race, Mr. Stewart's mare winning both mile heats.

Notice.
At a meeting of the town council held last night it was resolved to instruct Chief Gwyno to prevent all parties from sticking bills or posters on boardwalks, painting telegraph poles, etc., within the limits of the corporation.

Canadian Press Association.

The thirty-second annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association will be held in the Royal Hotel, Toronto, on Tuesday, Aug. 5th. The annual excursion this year will take place after the meeting, the route being from Toronto via Niagara Falls and Buffalo, to Chautauque, N. Y.

Special Meeting.
A special meeting of the members of Albert Orange Lodge, No. 1375, will be held at 8 o'clock on the evening of Tuesday 29th inst. at the residence of E. Flood, special adjutant of the Orange Mutual Benefit Association will be present. It is hoped that there will be a full attendance of the members of the lodge.

The Weather.
The weather during the past week has been very warm and dry, though yesterday
there was some rain but not sufficient to be of much benefit to the growing crop. Today was the hottest day thus far this season.
The maximum temperature during the past week was as follows:—11th, 78.5; 12th, 84; 13th, 85; 14th, 89; 15th, 90.6; 16th,
85; 17th, 75.

Elia Ross Excursions.
The excursions by the Elia Ross are attracting large numbers of people from all ports on the bay. To-day she carries an excursion from Napanee to Belleville and return. On Saturday, 19th, she carries an excursion from Belleville to Napanee, calling at Deseronto, arriving at Napanee at 6 p.m.
and returning leaves that town at 7 p.m.
fare, only 25 cents.

Carnities.
Fred Vanallen had one of his fingers crushed last week in the saw factory and yesterday, Wm. P. Adams, Jr., received a severe cut on one of his fingers from a knife in the saw factory. Both were attended by Dr. Vandervoort. On Tuesday Mr. George Walker the finger of his hand badly lacerated in the same establishment. Dr.
Newton attended to his injuries.

Burglary at Roslin.

An attempt was made at 2 o'clock on Monday morning to blow open the safe of John Holbert at Thornburg, but the burglars were surprised in the act and fled.
The tools left behind were stolen from Hudson's wagon shop. The thieves also broke open Mr. Hewitt's store at Roslin and secured nothing of value. The object of the raid was probably to get hold of $800 in Mr.
W. P. Hudson's charge, the proceeds of the Orange demonstration.

Headlines.

On Wednesday evening Chief Gwyno dispersed a gang of young rascals who were making night hideouts by their howls, and offending the ears of respectable citizens by their feebly profane and obscene language.
They were sitting on the high walk fronting Flower terrace with a large pile of beer from which they were drinking freely. It is with great reluctance that we refrain giving their names as they are the sons of respectable parents. Still, it might be asked, have their parents taken any pains to bring about a better state of things?

Serious Accident.

On Thursday morning, 17th inst., Mrs. T.
Roach, Jr., fell and broke her left leg above the ankle. It appears she was on her way to market and had reached the corner of Thomas and Centre streets on the other side of the street from Valieu's grocery, when she happened to step on a potter which had been placed upon the boardwalk. The rain had softened the paper and paste so that it was as slippery as so much grease, and Mrs.
Roach slipped with the already mentioned result. Mr. Roach was called to her aid and out and bit him on the leg. There are quite a number of these vicious dogs about town
whose destruction by the Chief would be hailed with satisfaction.

While Mr. A. S. Valieu was running for Dr. Newton to attend to Mrs. Roach's accident yesterday morning, a vicious dog ran out and bit him on the leg. There are quite a number of these vicious dogs about town
whose destruction by the Chief would be
hailed with satisfaction.

Subscriptions are being taken up in the Central Office for the purchase of jack-knives for three goldworkers who lack funds for the purchase of these instruments and are always borrowing. Why not get up a quilt drivers' excursion to Mosquito bay and thus raise the needed?

Of the 97 who wrote at the high school
entrance examinations in North Hastings 35 passed. Emma Clark, private study, heads the list with 597; Ethel Stephenson, of the public school, Madeo, is second with 582 and W. Salisbury, of Moira, is third with 492. There was a difference in the method of marking in that district, 402, being the minimum, instead of 397, as in South Hasting.

What is the matter in England? The postmaster-general, the metropolitan police go on strike, and the Grenadier guards are in a state of mutiny. These sturdy Englishmen are different from the paid servants of the crown in Canada, who are the most patriotic citizens we have and are apt to consider all other residents of the country as more or less disloyal.

A great many Canadian newspapers feared that the revolution in Brazil was ill-timed,
and that the people would demand a return to a monarchical form of government. But the people of that country are not fools.
They are only too well pleased with the self government which they enjoy and are only showing their attachment to the republic by fete and demonstrations. Dom Pedro is a pleasant figure in the past, but he will be forgotten long ago. He will be remembered as the last monarch who sat
upon a throne on the American continent.
No more it is.

"FAWCETT OF NEWNHAM"

A GLIMPSE OF THE MOST FAMOUS WOMAN IN GREAT BRITAIN.

The Highest Mathematical Honors at Cambridge Carried Away by a Girl of Twenty-Four—She Got 400 Marks More than the Highest Man.

The greatest event in the history of woman's education is the recent triumph of Miss Phillips Fawcett at Newnham in the mathematical trip of Cambridge. Probably no one over entered a contest with more complete control of all her faculties and less nervous apprehension than did this woman, whose rivals were of the best male, whose most formidable opponent was so distinguished a mathematician that a former senior wrangler
on learning the result was heard to declare:
"This is a honor to herself she would have been senior in any year." In the achievement of so important a success Miss Fawcett possessed the advantages of inherited general power from both parents, a habit of close attention to study, an education of the most thorough and advanced type, and, above all, a wonderful determination and determination of character and untiring good judgment and common sense in her habits of study and living. It was not only of the female virgins who inspire in the traditional midnight and morning oil in their feverish anxiety until brain and nerves are exhausted.
Despite her keen desire to succeed she never violated her rigid habit of retiring at 11 and rising at 8 o'clock. About six hours a day was her usual allowance for study, but during those six hours her work was conscientious and rigorous, as may be inferred. She went freely into general and college studies, enjoyed plan-ty of exercise of her favorite games of lawn tennis and hockey, handled the pen with skill and ease born of experience and admiration.

For the encounter, occasionally took a haul
in the debates of Newnham Political Society and altogether depicted herself in a healthy, happy way, quite the reverse of the typical prize winning girl. When some one asked her at the approach of the contest: "Don't you wish it were over?" she answered
a reply "No, I don't want to have three weeks taken out of my life." When the ordeal presented itself she faced it with the resolution that she would do her best, and not worry, as anxiety only lessened her chances of success. She slept every night as soundly as ever, wrote her papers coolly and carefully until the end, and at the end was convinced that she had done badly because she was not worried.

On the morning of the day the lists were read she confessed to an early awaking, but when Mr. Ball took off his college cap and read, amid the cheers of the assembled students, "Fawcett Newnham, above George Wright," she stood in the little balcony beside her principal the most serene individual in the house, and when it was all over and she returned to her room, escorted by a procession of students beating bells and waving banners, she marched composedly up to the page on which the "In" and "Out" labels were placed and simply put her own right foot on the "In" label.

The furniture in the pretty little chamber
she occupies consists of polished old wood bed and cozier chairs, the decorations a relier of Donatello's in white plaster, a few panels, and a water color, but of Sussex near her mother's house, all hung on severe plaster walls. Among the books on science, poetry, and romance in her bookcase above the heavy volumes of mathematical lore are a few prettily bound by the fingers of her own as an expert needlewoman, with a nice skill in embroidery as well. At tea time a kettle singing on the hob gives an air of hospitality and coziness to the student's chamber.

In dress Miss Fawcett conforms to conventions, though selecting always the most unassuming of fashion's vagaries. When she was younger she wore her thick dark hair down on her shoulders and expressed her idea of dress in simple and careless unconventional, slightly Bohemian in its style. She usually wore a "rag" of hair, and her original ity in dress or deportment would be seized upon as indicative of eccentricity, due to the atmosphere of the work she did, and her very readiness to see independence to the demands of the manna mark, reserving only the right to array her slight, girlish figure in the simplest way conformable with good taste.

In manner she is vivacious and merry, with a quick sense of humor and hearty appreciation of and relish for jokes.

In her work her methods are marked by extreme clearness and decision. She always has a definite purpose in tackling a problem, and she usually accomplishes it. She usually de-liberates until she discovers the quickest way to a result, and then more than regains in rapid solution the time lost in contemplation.
She is constantly improved under the college training and she is quite as well now
as ever in her life, despite the excitement and nervous strain she has undergone. A large number of prizes will be awarded to successful competitors. The silver cup, presented by Mr. G. E. Suler, was won last year for the first time by Wm. Stuart, Jr., and is now his property. Messrs. A. A. Richardson, R. H. Baker and C. E. Hulse have however, purchased the other handsome silver cup, which will be suitably engraved, and will be presented to the successful competitor in the men's 300 yard race on the same conditions as in former years. The picnic must prove a great success this year.

Exciting contests for prizes
at the Young People's Lawn Festival, Friday evening, July 18th.

People Wonder

WHEN they find how rapidly health is restored by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The reason is that this preparation contains only the purest and most powerful alteratives and tonics. To thousands yearly it proves a veritable elixir of life.

Mrs. Jos. Lake, Brockway Centre, Mich., writes: "I never complained indignation made my life a burden
and came near ending my existence.
For more than four years I suffered untold agony. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Notwithstanding that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Since commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an

Improvement

In my condition, my appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention, I was able to stand on all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life, and I cannot thank you too much.

Brockway Centre, Mich., hereby certify
that the above statement, made by Mrs. Lake, is true in every particular, and entitled to full credit." C. F.
Chamberlain, C. W. Waring, C. A.

My brother, in England, was, for a long time, unable to stand on his feet.
By reason of sores on his feet. I treatment it contained induced him to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using it he was cured, and is now a

well man, working in a sugar mill
at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia."

TYENDINAGA RESERVE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The ferry question still agitates the minds of our people, the Katchewan Bros. will be trespassers on the north shore until the rent due a prior notice is paid.

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. Hill and Willie Brand who were last week seriously ill are now convalescent.

Money allowed by the municipality for improvements on the church line does not appear to have all reached its destination. It is a road much travelled by farmers taking their grain to Baker's dock.

Miss Kate Maracle, who has been teaching the mission school for some time, has resigned this week.

The proceeds of the 4th of June picnic in Edmund's Grove have been expended in repairs to the Mission school house which is now in first-class order.

SHANNONVILLE.
From Our Own Correspondent.

Mrs. A. S. Rolph, of Ottawa, is visiting her mother, Mr. Rolph, of Deseronto, who is visiting friends in the village during the past week.

Miss Annie McAlpine, of Marysville, is the guest of Miss Maud Doreen, of the Lorne Hotel.

Mr. Weller, of Belleville, has leased Mr. M. B. Lake's cannery factory and started the factory this week.

The funeral service of the late Mrs. J. Henden took place at the Methodist Church on Tuesday last and was largely attended.

Rev. E. D. Lewis conducting the service assisted by Rev. W. H. Peake former pastor of that Church.

Sacrament service will be held in the Presbyterian Church on Sabbath next, service beginning at 3 o'clock p.m.

TRAFFORD.
From Our Own Correspondent.

Heavy picking is all the rage around here now, but the red raspberries are somewhat scarce. Huckle berries are very plentiful.

People are very busy harvesting and hired help very scarce.

Our roads are splendid at present, owing to the good work done under the superintendence of W. J. Dowling.

Mr. Thomas Fitzgerald's mowing bee on last Saturday was a success, he getting very much done, and all had a very pleasant time in the evening.

Mr. W. T. Graham has been through our vicinity buying cattle.

Mr. Richard Murphy and wife were at Ennville last Saturday attending the funeral of Mrs. Michael C. Murphy.

Mr. M. Whalen is seriously ill from the effects of La Grippe and a complication of other diseases.

Mr. Luke Whelan and Mr. John Grant, of Napanee, were visiting Trafford last Sunday and Mr. Thomas Cousens and Richard Murphy also.

Miss Libbie Laveck, of Enterprise, was visiting her mother's last Sunday.

Mr. Charles McCallen was visiting his parents on Sunday.

Farmers have begun cutting the fall grain which is a fair crop.

Mr. Samuel Spencer threshed Mr. Ira Murphy's peas last Monday and they turned out very well.

Miss Gordon, Kingsford, is visiting here as the guest of Mrs. Philip Way.

Miss Rogers, of Deseronto, was visiting at Mr. John Lambert's for a few days last week.

Mr. Chester Black lost a valuable horse in a well one day last week.

Mr. Frank Solmes left last week to rejoin her husband at Tacoma, Washington.

SOLMESVILLE.

From An Occasional Correspondent.

The schoolhouse in S. S. No. 17, recently erected under the direction of Mr. John Wyma, presents a very fine appearance.

Several applications have been forwarded already.

Mrs. Todd and Mrs. McGee are spending the day at the home of the Rev. Mr. Smith, of Centerville.

Farmers are rejoicing in the fine weather for harvesting. The laying season is fairly begun and the yield promises to be a most plentiful one.

Miss Davis, of Toronto, is visiting her brother, Mr. S. Davis.

Mr. Henry Cole, our general storekeeper, is dealing in horses this summer.

The beautiful flowers at the home of Mr. Jas. Lilly are the admiration of all passers-by.

Mr. R. Jones and son are quite busy erecting hay racks in this vicinity.

Mr. J. Smith arrived home from Bay City, Michigan.

Our young folks are quite settled down again after a most pleasant and successful stay in the city.

Mr. J. Smith is now engaged in the hay trade and is not seen around on the corner about sunrise.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

Logs are now coming into Belleville in large numbers.

Mr. J. Brown has been elected a school trustee in Belleville.

The Roman Catholic picnic at Tweed took place on the first week of September.

A. W. Carleton and J. C. Hubbell have been appointed justices of the peace in Napanee.

The residence of G. L. Grass, Plainfield, was burned on Tuesday evening. The fire was caused by a defective chimney. Loss $1,200; insurance $800.

Mr. John Laid, an old and respected resident of Muldo, died on Tuesday, aged 82 years. He was born in London, England, and came to this country in 1815.

Dr. J. G. Potts, of Ameliasburg, was an ardent abolitionist in the civil war and expected to be elected a member of the United States government, and a further pension of $1,000 a year.

ST. MARK'S CHURCH NOTES.

To-day (July 25th) is the festival of the apostle and martyr St. James. There will be a service at 7:45.

The St. James who is commemorated on this day was St. James the Great or James who was the brother of Jesus the Christ and the first of the Holy Apostles.

The Rector was assisted last Sunday by the Rev. A. L. Green who kindly took Mr. James's place, and presided at the evening service.

As previously announced Mr. Patton assisted the Rector of Adolphustown, Ont., officiating at St. Mark's Church, St. James's morning, in the new St. Alban's, E. Memorial Church in the afternoon, and in Union Church in the evening. The parish and its good Rector is to be congratulated upon the completion of the strikingly handsome and well planned St. Mark's Church, with its many memorials of the gallant U. E. Loyalists.

The funeral of Mabel Samson took place from St. Mark's Church on Monday last, to the St. Mark's cemetery. The deceased bore her long illness with much Christian fortitude and courage.

Church School formed the choir and very feebly rendered the music at the service.

It has been decided to hold the excursion from St. Mark's Church on Monday last, to the St. Mark's cemetery, on Friday, August 8th. The place selected to be visited will probably be the beautiful "Old Ripper's Cove" on the south shore of the Bay about half an hour's sail from Adolphustown.

The excursion will leave Deseronto by the steamer Hero at 10 a.m. on Friday, August 8th. A good method is to place each specimen in a sheet of brown paper and interpose several empty sheets between each two of those filled.

When the papers are quite damp, separate them and spread them on the floor of a room where they can dry without being disturbed. When the papers are quite dry, separate them and spread them on the floor of a room where they can dry without being disturbed.

Repeat this daily until the flowers are quite dry. They can then be laid away or pasted into black books, classified or numbered.

MAKING AN HERBARIUM.

A pleasant way for young people to improve themselves is by making a herbarium on a summer vacation is to make an herbarium or a collection of pressed wild flowers.

To acquire the art of making a herbarium, the student should first select a place in the woods and fields, the places to attend to are to dry the specimens quickly, thoroughly and with a pressure that will not injure the plant.

VALDIMIR THE MONK.

BY SYLVANUS CORN.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Count Conrad Danmoff was able to sit up. He was in a great deal of pain, playing with a favorite dog, while near by him sat Stephen Uzen. The young nobleman had gained rapidly since the visit of Ruric, for the antiseptic he had taken had proved efficient, and he soon came back to the point he had reached before the administering of the poison.

"Stephen," he said, pushing his dog gently from him, "has anything been heard yet from Ruric Nevel?"

"Not that I know of," returned Uzen. "Oh, I wish I were able to assist in his search. But have you heard anything of what suspicious may be about?"

"Only that the humpbacked priest is looked upon by some as having a hand in it."

"Ha—and how does suspicion point toward him?"

"Why—in no direct way, I believe. I cannot understand it. All I know is, he is suspected."

The count pondered a few moments, and he thought he could see it. Uzen did not know the secret of his friend's strange raptures, for that had been kept private; so he had no clue to the priest's true character such as the count possessed.

"I believe the fellow is a villain," Uzen resumed. "He is surely a villainous-looking man."

"So he is," responded the count. "I never saw such a wicked-looking fellow in any human form."

"Ah," uttered a voice close by the door. "Who comes in for the flattering remark, my friend?"

Both the count and Stephen turned, and the humpbacked priest himself stood in their presence.

"Ha!" he uttered, as he noticed the position of the invalid. "Up! by the Holy Virgin, you are recovering."

"Ay," returned Conrad, "I am gaining fast now, as you may see."

The priest stretched hard with his feelings, and at length he managed to conceal the deep disappointment he felt. This is—

he hid it from Stephen's eyes, but the count knew him too well.

"You have not been very punctual of late, father," the latter said, also trying to conceal his real feelings.

"No—no," returned Savatano in a perplexed manner. "I did not think, but the fact is, I have been called away. Let's see—I have not been here since the evening on which I found a stranger sitting by your side while you were asleep."

"Who was the stranger?"

"I don't know. I think I never saw him before. He was a good-looking young man. Perhaps he was some relative of yours."

This downright falsehood—so bold and flagrant—astounded even the count, for he knew the conversation which the priest had with Ruric on that occasion.

And quick as lightning, too, went the thought to the sick man's mind that this was to hide the probability of his being of use in connection with Ruric's disappearance.

"I thought you knew that man," the count said, looking the priest sharply in the face.

"No, I may have seen him before, but I did not surely recognize him then. I asked him why he was here, but he would not answer me save by saying, 'Who was he, my son?'"

The count was at first inclined not to answer, but he thought better of it, and finally told the priest that it was Ruric Nevel. The villain seemed much surprised at this, and professed to wonder why the fellow should come to that place. Uzen, who knew nothing of the falsehood which rested under all this questioning, went on and explained the nature of Ruric's mission, and its result.

And thereupon Savatano expressed a wonderful degree of joy and gratification; and he pronounced even to bless God that such a reconciliation had taken place.

"And now," the priest resumed, after this matter had been disposed of, "how happened this sudden change in your disease, my son? The doctors thought you dying when I was here last."

"Yes—I know," answered the count, still hiding the deep disgust that moved within him; "but a new medicine was called in, and he prescribed a new medicine. He said the medicine I had been taking was unsuited to my case, and so he gave me new. You are the result."

"Yes—yes," was the reply; "and as you seem to have very good company I'll take my leave. I have several calls to make before night."

The count made no reply to this, and as the priest found that he was not urged to remain he arose at once. He stopped twice before he reached the door, but in neither case did he speak. As soon as he gained the street he turned toward the palace of the city, and he stopped not until he had reached the palace of the Duke of Tula.

The old porter admitted him without question, and he made his way at once to the hall where he was to be received. One of the servants went in search of his master, and when he returned he led the priest follow him.

The duke was in his private room, and as soon as the servant had withdrawn he bade his visitor take a seat.

"Now, Savatano, how is it?" he asked. "Have you seen the count?"

"Ay—I am from there now. By all that's bad, my lord, the villain is gaining."

"Gaining?" repeated Olga, with surprise. "But you assured me he was well-nigh gone?"

"So he was—no he was. But he is recovering now."

"But how is it?"

"Why—he tells me he had a new physician, and that the old medicine was all demolished, and an entire new course prescribed."

"And under this new treatment he is recovering, oh?"

"Well—have you not taken some measures to fix this new medicine? By the gods, Savatano, you must not let him slip away."

"Ah, my lord, I have only told you how he explained the matter. I have another explanation."

"What is it, sir priest?"

"Why they simply know that some one has attempted to poison the count."

"Ha! Did they say anything?"

"No—there was no word. I know that when the duke was taking before me the right kind of medicine, so far as it came from the hands of the surgeon. And then there is another thing: The count must have had some powerful antidote on purpose for the poison."

"How do you know that?"

"Simply because he would not have now been alive had not been the case. You may be sure, my lord, that they know poison has been administered. They have discovered it in some way, and taken the most effective and speedy method to overcome it. I know that."

"And do you think they suspect you?" the duke asked, with some show of uneasiness.

"I don't know, but I fear they do. However, that amounts to nothing—only to prevent me from working any further at present in the same direction. I have not said myself open to detection in any way. By heavens, 'tis too bad! In four-and-twenty hours more he would have been a dead man."

"Then you know when the discovery was made?"

"Yes—on the afternoon before Ruric Nevel was captured. I was there just before night, and the gun-maker was then there, and I noticed that the phials were gone from the table, though I gave no signs then of having noticed it. They had even commenced a new treatment for his cure, for I could see that the appearance of his skin had changed. You must not blame me."

"I do not, Savatano. But there may be some way left yet."

"Oh, yes; there are a hundred ways in which we can dispose of him. But I may find some way yet before he gets out."

"Look you," the duke said, after a short pause, "ponder over his own thoughts. You must watch every chance. Something may turn up in your favor. You may find some opportunity to finish him yet. I wish you could."

"I will do all I can be sure of that. I shall watch him day and night. And now about the other one. Young Nevel is safe, and can be disposed of at any moment. I have let him live thus far, because I had no orders other than to kill him."

"Ay—that was right," replied Olga, and as he did so he arose and commenced to pace the room. The priest followed him with his eyes, and at length the duke stopped and looked Savatano in the face.

"It would not be a difficult task to kill him," he uttered in a low whisper.

"Not at all. Nothing could be more easy."

"Can detection ensue?"

"In no possible way."

"Listen!" spoke the humpback, as Olga hesitated. "I strongly suspect that this was some gunmaker that led to the investigation of that medicine; and if it was him, then you will be more quickly suspected than I shall."

"Because he is a fellow of wondrous wit and intelligence, and can see without being told. He has had several chances here, and it was from here that he went direct to the count's residence. He knows by this time why the duke was hatched up, and if he has half the mind I give him credit for, he will know that you are at the bottom of the poisoning business. I am sure of this."

"By heavens, you are right, Savatano. Let him die."

"I had thought myself that would be the best way; for if he were at large you would not be safe."

"You can have him killed without noise or disturbance."

"I think so," replied the priest, with a wicked smile. "I will have the deed done, and not hurt any one, for he is rather too far away from the world to make himself heard."

"Where is he?"

"Why—where you recommended: in the furthest vault beneath your old bathing-house; and that is a place where he cannot be readily found."

"And what disposition can you make of the body after the work is done?"

"Why—that is simple. It can be hidden in the old conduit. You know the conduit still exists there, and probably in some places between the river and it is perfect. I can bury the body in it as in a ruin. The body can be hidden so far in that no stench can come from it in summer time even to those in the vault itself. So you see that is easy."

"Then let the work be done at once—say to-night."

"To-morrow night, my lord, will do as well, for I am engaged to-night."

"Very well—let it be to-morrow night. But mind this is settled. There is no more question about this affair. When I see you again I trust you will have no reason to offer why Ruric Nevel has not been disposed of."

"You need have no fears on that head, my lord. You may consider that the gun-maker is dead."

"Right! So let it be."

And thus did the wicked duke dispose of Ruric Nevel!

And Olga took a turn across the room, and when he stopped there was a dark cloud upon his brow.

"Savatano," he said, "is there one more man whom I at least would be assured is not in my way. I mean that infernal monk."

"I saw him this morning, my lord, and I am sure he is watching me. And he is not alone. He has others with him. I have been followed, and one of my men—the one who entrapped Nevel—told me, not two hours ago, that he knew his steps had been followed."

"And do you think this monk is at the bottom of it?" asked the duke, with some uneasiness.

"I know it, for I have seen him when I know he was watching me."

"Then why have you not got him out of the way?"

"Ah," uttered the priest with a dubious shake of the head, "we cannot always do as we please. He is not alone, for long—I can help him off; and I think the opportunity may offer itself."

"He is a bold fellow. Why—I found him only yesterday in my own place—in the chamber of the countess."

"And could you not have disposed of him then?"

"Not well. It was in broad day, and people were about. But if I catch him here again my sword shall find his heart. I have given him legal warning." "But," continued the duke, after some further thought, "you must be careful in your dealings with him. He may have some organized band always about him."

"I will be caught in no trap," returned the priest contemptuously. "He shall find that I can be as quick as he can. But it is very strange—"

"What is strange?" asked Olga, starting, for he, too, had been thinking of a very strange thing.

"Why—that this black monk should turn up here in Moscow so suddenly, and commence the first thing, to dog my footsteps."

"Ay," responded Olga. "And the same thought was in my mind when you spoke. But never mind—he shall not escape me. He presumes much more. By heavens, they shall know that the Duke of Tula is not to be trifled with. There is but one power in Moscow above mine, and that is the Emperor himself; and I may say that even he is not above me. He cannot get along without me. Does anything turn up to puzzle him, he sends straightway for me."

"Then use your power for your own good, my lord."

"I will. Fear not for me on that score." At this juncture the priest arose to take his leave.

"You have your instructions," said Olga.

"I remember them well, my lord—and they shall be carried out to the letter."

"And when done, let me know."

"And once more the misshapen priest was in the street, and the duke was alone."

"Ah, my lord," muttered the priest to himself, as he walked thoughtfully along, "you may be a little too confident of your own power. I have known such things in this city."

CHAPTER XIV.

Away back of the old cathedral of Moscow, and in a narrow, dark court which was overlooked by the towers of the giant edifice, stood a curiously constructed stone building, which, though not connected bodily with the cathedral, yet seemed to belong to it. It was low and broad, with a flat, tiled roof, and without a visible window. Within one of the apartments of this building—an apartment away down in the bowels of the earth, where the light of day never came—were seated six men. The room was small, and the floor, the walls, and the ceiling were of dark stone. Wooden benches were arranged about the place; and there were some other articles of furniture there—two strange contrivances they were, and fashioned after various shapes and patterns. But of that anon. The place was lighted by a large hanging lamp, which had just power enough to make the room dim and dismal. The six men, sitting on a table, on which were a book and sword; and the most prominent man there was Valdimir the Monk!

And Valdimir alone exposed his face. All the rest wore black masks, their robes being of the same melancholy hue. They sat there silent as death, Valdimir gazing upon the table, and the other five gazing fixedly upon him. They were stout men all of them, and they bore themselves towards Valdimir as bears a servant to his acknowledged master.

"The hour is waxing late," said Valdimir, at length looking up from the table. His voice came as death, for it was low and hoarse, and it was low and hoarse, and the others started as they heard it.

"There's time yet to spare, master," replied one who sat next to him.

"I trust we shall not be disappointed," said Valdimir, at the expiration of a few moments more.

To this no answer was returned. At length there came a dull echo from overhead, and the six dark eyes started up to listen. The sound grew louder, and soon it set down into that dismal chamber the notes of coming footsteps. In a few moments the six men started up, and upon their fingers, and three men entered, and soon behind them came three more. Those who came in advance were two of them leading the third as a prisoner. And so it was with those behind. The iron door creaked again, and when the heavy bolts had been shoved into their sockets, the two prisoners were led forward.

"Master," spoke one of the newcomers, "we have brought the prisoners—two of them—as you commanded."

"It is well," said Valdimir. "Let them be brought before us."

As the two men are brought where the light can strike upon their faces we see the two guides who conducted Ruric Nevel to his place of confinement. One of them was who met Ruric in the street, and the other was the one who guided him into the old bath-house with the lantern in his hand. They shuddered fearfully as they passed around upon the dismal scene, and their looks plainly showed that they knew not why they had been brought thither.

"Luric Nevel!" pronounced Valdimir. The first of the prisoners, who had been Ruric in the street—started as he heard that name, and tried to speak.

"Are you the man?" asked the monk, looking into his face.

"Yes, holy father," the wretch tremblingly replied.

"Then stand you here in front of me." The fellow was moved up in front of the table, and started as he found himself to be struggling for the mastery over him, for he recognized now the strange monk about whom he had probably heard so much.

"Luric Nevel," said Valdimir, lowly and slowly, "you have been seen much in the company of a humpbacked priest named Savatano. You know such a priest, do you not?"

"The man hesitated. He gazed furiously about him, and trembled more than before. The fellow started at the question was asked, but he seemed to be prepared for it, for his answer was direct.

"No, sir; I do not."

"He-haw! I think well before you speak."

"If you mean the man who fought the duel with the Count Danmoff, then I have heard of him; but I do not know that I ever saw him."

"Then you are sure of this?"

"Frederick Vaska!"

The second prisoner now came forward. He was a few years younger than his companion, though somewhat larger and evidently more bold. Tula was conducted out of the apartment as Vaska came forward.

"You, too, have been in the company of this priest, Savatano, have you not?" the monk asked.

"I know him," the fellow replied, with a slight touch of defiance in his tone. He had not surely looked about him to see those strange contrivances by which he was surrounded, or he would not have ventured such an answer.

"And you have been some in his company?"

"Perhaps so."

"Very well. And now do you not also know Ruric Nevel?"

"I have seen him, too, sir."

"And now you tell me where he is at this present time?"

"No," was the answer short and quick.

"Beware! If you have any regard for your own welfare you will answer me truly. Where is Ruric Nevel?"

"I tell you I know nothing about him—nothing at all."

"And all of you are sure?"

"What are you at issue to question me that I know you not?"

Vaska spoke this in a tone of just indignation, probably thinking that that turn might serve him.

"We will let you out of these hands by the monk returned, with a peculiar shake of the head. "But I will ask you once more: Do you know where Nevel is?"

"No."

"You need not speak quite so fast. We hear easily."

"Then don't ask me impudent questions," retorted the prisoner.

Valdimir started half-way up, and his face grew crimsoned; but the quick glances passed from his face, and he sat back again.

"Look you," he said, as soon as he was sure his anger would not manifest itself. "Were I not sure that you know what I ask I would not question you thus. And now, once more, I ask you: Will you give me some clue to the whereabouts of Ruric Nevel?"

"I'll answer you one more. I know nothing about this. You must not think that this dark place, and you men all dressed in black, can fright me into telling a lie to-night."

At this point Valdimir turned to one of his men, and the fellow who had helped the prisoners in—and said:

"You know this to be the man?"

"Yes, my master."

"And you have seen him in private confab with the humpbacked priest?"

"I have."

"And the other things you told me are true?"

"They are, master."

"Then let down those interpreters."

At this command two of the attendants moved to the back side of the room, where they unhooked a stout chain from the wall, and as they allowed it to slide through their hands, serious pieces of machinery descended directly in front of the table. It consisted of a stout bar of iron, which was suspended midway, upon the chain, and there rested parallel with the ceiling. Upon each end of this bar were straps of iron, armed with springs and screws. At a motion from the monk the prisoner was led back till he stood directly beneath the bar, and then his arms were seized and raised up. He struggled some and cursed merrily, but he was soon overcome. The iron bands were passed around his wrists, and connected with these were two small cups, which were slipped over the thumbs. After these had been firmly secured the chain was tightened, and the fellow's hands were raised far above his head. There were two results produced by tightening the chain: It not only tended to draw the thumbs back, but it also twisted the thumb, the two cups being armed with file-like teeth within, and closing tightly upon the flesh.

"Now, sir, spoke Valdimir, lowly and deeply, "I am going to ask these questions again, and you will be well to answer them truly. Will you tell me where Ruric Nevel is?"

"I don't know."

"Will you tell me where you saw him last?"

"I haven't seen him since he fought the duel with Danmoff."

"Beware!"

"I have not."

"Mark me: I have had you watched, and deeply, 'I am going to ask these questions again, and you will be well to answer them truly. Will you tell me where Ruric Nevel is?"

"I don't know."

"Will you tell me where you saw him last?"

"I haven't seen him since he fought the duel with Danmoff."

"Beware!"

"I have not."

Valdimir made a motion to the two men who stood by the wall, and they gave a pull upon the chain.

"Glad!" gasped the prisoner, as the painful grip and wrench came upon his thumbs.

"Will you answer?"

"How can I? How can I? I'm speaking what you know."

"Is nothing?"

Another signal was made to the men at the chain, and they pulled again. Another groan from the prisoner, but no other response.

Another signal—and another pull. "Mercy!" shrieked the poor wretch, quivering with pain.

"Will you answer?"

"I don't know."

"Then we must try again."

"No, no—oh, God, no more!"

"But you must answer."

"I don't know."

"Then you must have forgotten, and such treacherous memories need starting up."

"Valdimir this spoke he waved his hand again.

"Oh! God have mercy! Save me! Save me!"

Save yourself."

The wretch was in torment now without ceasing. Nearly the whole of his weight hung upon his wrists and thumbs, and the latter were drawn over almost to the wrist.

But he was not alone. He had a deeper fear than this. He feared to look the horrid eyes at which he was so the scheming priest.

"One more pull upon the chain, and the man's feet were clear of the floor. His whole weight now bore upon his thumbs, and he groaned in the agony of torture. He was a few moments, but his convulsed could bear no more.

"Oh, God! Down! down! Let me down!"

"But answer. Where is Ruric Nevel?"

"I—I don't know."

"Hold, then, false-hearted villain!" shouted Valdimir, in a voice of thunder. "This is the last of this torture; but when we take you from here we can put you into a state compared with which the pain you now experience is real joy! Each particular limb shall be wrangled all out of shape, and your very eyes shall start out like—"

"Down! down! Oh, great God, down!"

"I'll tell you, Ruric Nevel."

"I'll tell you—I'll tell you spare me!"

"Tell me first!"

There was a moment more of hesitation—single moment—and then the miserable wretch gave up.

"He is in the old bath-house."

"He is! Where?"

"In the old bath near the river—the old Tula pass—in one of the vaults!"

"Very well. Let him down."

The chain was slackened up, and Frederick Vaska was once more upon his feet. He trembled yet, for there was pain in his arms.

An Interesting Find.
On Saturday last while enjoying an outing on the bay Messrs. Jas. Warren and W. E. Smith observed in the vicinity of Huff's dock what appeared to be a sprucey growth attached to a twig. They secured their prize and Mr. Smith, who is an amateur naturalist of repute, discovered that it is a specimen of the Hydrilla. It is alleged that this is the second specimen of the kind that has been found in fresh water in the province. It is a most interesting find. In 1871 it was discovered by Monsieur De Pime in a lake in the vicinity of Geneva. It has been a matter of some debate whether it is an insect growth or a vegetable formation.

Leaves Festival.

The lawn festival held under the auspices of the young people of the Methodist congregation, notwithstanding the cool weather, proved a gratifying success and netted over thirty dollars for the proceeds in view. There was a large attendance and the grounds were well lighted with lanterns, Chinese lanterns, etc. The Citizens' Band furnished music. The sports and games afforded much amusement.
The ladies sold ice-cream, cake and lemonade in vast quantities. The following persons constituted the committee of this successful festival: Misses Scott, Hodge, Bogart, Reynolds, Mrs. Wilcox, and Messrs. J. M. Smith, Fred. Hull, McGrath and McCloskey.

High School Entrance Examinations.

Of the 112 candidates who wrote for high school entrance examinations at Belleville 60 were successful, and of the 18 who wrote Tuesday's test successful.
The failures were chiefly in arithmetic and grammar. Jennie Matthews heads the list with 549 marks, the first three on the list are pupils of Miss Truham, of Belleville, who passed seventeen candidates.
It will be observed that Miss Jessie Mackie with 580 marks and Miss Stella Vandervoort 552, both of Deseronto public school,
have the honor of leading in South Hastings this year. Both young ladies having acquitted themselves in a highly creditable manner. Among others we see in the Belleville list are: B. Robinson, Foxboro, 487; M. Maxwell, Shannonville, 483; H. Walburn, Plainfield, 458; B.
Davenport, No. 4, Tyendinaga, 433; W.
McGraw, 427; Tyendinaga, 405.
Teacher, C. Tyndinaga, 405.

A visit to the two houses now in course of erection on Maple Avenue by Messrs.
A. Leggett and S. Cronk shows the advantage of the use of fire proof porous terra cotta in the building of private residences.
Both houses are frame constructed, built of 24 inch studding, clappedboard on the outside and filled in on the inside with porous terra cotta new studding blocks.
Many advantages are derived from this terra cotta filling. The studding, by the interlacing of the porous terra cotta, is cut off from fire. Such houses will undoubtedly prove warmer than an ordinary brick house, because there are two air spaces in the thickness throughout the whole wall. Then, again, no lathing is required, as the coats of plaster can be placed directly upon the terra cotta tiles.
It is not surprising to find that this material is now coming into general use, not only in the better class of business blocks, but in private residences as well.

COUNTY AFFAIRS.

Dr. Bell the venerable clerk of the county stated that he did not think there would be a special meeting of the council this year for the purpose of incorporating the village of Trenton. He said there would certainly be no opposition to incorporate next year and there was no necessity for hurry.

"Where will they put the new members?"

"That's a question," replied the happy
doctor who has passed his eightieth year.
The council chamber is now filled to its fullest capacity. I don't see any other alternative than to put the reporters out," laughed the clerk. "Probably Deseronto might be induced to withdraw from the county which would make the necessary room required for the new members coming from Carleton and Faraday, lately given representation to the council. Trenton drew out after the county had built them a bridge. Pretty cute fellows, those up there in Trenton."—Belleville Ontario.

TOWN COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Town Council was held on Thursday evening, July 17th, the Mayor presiding, and the members present except Reeve Aylsworth and Councillor Carter. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved.
Petitions were read as follows:—From W. G. Egar and twenty-five others praying for a grant of $100 for the Citizens' Band, and from F. S. Rathbun and others for a similar grant for the Mechanics' Institute.
Moved by Deputy Reeve Rathbun, seconded by Councillor Richardson that $50 be granted to each. Carried.

The Clerk read a bill from the Rathbun Company for $250 for fire appliances, $250 for 28 gas lamps and $175 for gas for town hall. Referred to the proper committee.

Councillor Richardson for the Street Committee reported that up to the 12th inst. $716.35 had been expended on streets, and on the motion seconded by Councillor Cronk the report was adopted.
This committee also made the following recommendations in reference to the petitions referred to them at the previous meeting:—The present 4 ft. walk on west side of St. George's street between Main and Edmund streets is a nuisance in reference to Principal Knight's petition; they recommended opening and grading of Stanley street so that teams could reach public schools; that a crossing be made over Dundas street on west side of Centre street in reference to R. H. Bogart's petition, recommended a 4 ft. walk on northern terminus of present walk on St. George's street to Maple avenue, a crossing to be made and walk continued along the north side of said avenue to the rail gate, etc., and that Messrs. Rathbun & Blakie be requested to hang gate to open to the north, estimated cost of this walk, $162;
and in reference to a petition of A. S. Vallent and others they recommended 24 in. of tile drain emptying into Centre street sewer at a cost of $40. The committee also recommended a 4 ft. walk on south side of Green street for about 200 ft. south of Thomas street, cost $39.60, two crossings
on south side of Thomas street across St.
George and Fourth streets, cost $25, and new walk on the west side of Fourth street
from Dundas to Thomas street, cost $75. On motion of Councillor Richardson, seconded by Dep. Reeve Rathbun, the report was adopted.

Councillor Cronk stated that a promise had been given to Brock and Blakie, that if they gave land for new streets near high school a boardwalk would be laid down past their place on north side of Thomas street. On motion of Councillor Blakie, seconded by Councillor McLaughlin, the council ordered a 6 ft. walk to be laid to driving park entrance.

Councillor Richardson drew attention to the accident which befell Mr. J. Roach, Jr., on his way to work on his job, on his way
across the bridge, and on his way to work,
was resolved to order the chief of police to prevent the use of the sidewalks or on painted telegraph poles.

The Clerk stated that the County estimated for 1898-25 for Deseronto, referred to finance committee.

A communication was read from the high school board making a requisition for rent for the current year. Councillor Richardson presented the following memorandum from the high school board giving financial statement.

Deseronto, July 15th, 1890.

A requisition was also received from the public school board for $2,500 for expenses of the current year, of which $1,500 of which for salaries of teachers and $50 for school house appendages. In reference to the high school board requisition Councillor Richardson stated that he was agreeably disappointed that he was agreeably disappointed that he had been inclined at one time to think the board had been extravagant, but learned that Mr. Rathbun had made no charge for paint-taking and not looking extravagant. The building was a credit to the town and a source of pride to every resident. The school was proving a benefit to the town as it was stimulating the boys and girls of the public schools to increased exertions. The teachers were competent. Both requisitions were adopted and ordered to be paid by the clerk.

On motion Councillor Geddis, seconded by Councillor Richardson, further consideration of the early closing bylaw was deferred until the next meeting of Council, the Chair being again instructed to enforce compliance with the bylaw in the meantime.

Council adjourned until August 21st.

THINNING FRUIT.

The horticulturist of the Missouri Experiment station has made some analyses of apples during the different periods of their growth, which show that much of the greater proportion of the ash is stored up in the early part of the growth of the fruit. This is urged as an additional reason for thinning as soon as the wormy and imperfect specimens of the fruit can be distinguished. A barrel of large apples takes a smaller amount of mineral plant food from the soil than a barrel of small inferior fruit. The apples on an acre of ground when the trees are thin, bear more apart and yield ten bushels of fruit to the tree, take from the soil more than forty-three pounds of potash. This suggests the use of ashes, or of the potash salts, as a dressing for orchards.

In reply to an inquiry concerning the distance at which fruit should be kept to remain, the editor of the Country Gentleman says—the distance will vary with the size of varieties, and with the intended use of the fruit. As a general rule, the mature ripe, large peaches should be four or five inches apart on the bearing branches, and small or early ones three or four inches; pears should be at quite as great distances, with more variation for differences in size, for while such diminutive pears as the Summer Doyenne need not be more than two or three inches apart, the Angouleme should be at least six inches. Plums may be rather less than peaches, but the necessity of thinning is even more urgent, as many of them are very small and of no value from their size. Any orchardist may have observed the improved quality, as well as size, apples with a moderate crop, and should thin accordingly. It should not be forgotten or overlooked that fruit properly thinned will bear more and of a better quality, and that no loss in the magnitude of the crop occurs, and a positive gain in quality and price is secured by thinning.

It is well known to every school boy that the first step which Columbus should have attempted—reach Asia by a westward voyage from Europe—was Fernando Magellan, and that the first circumnavigation of the globe was accomplished by the remnant of Magellan's crew. Within the last few years, however, additional information has been obtained, and it is now known that the globe was discovered by the remnant of Magellan's crew, partly through the discovery of some forgotten narratives of the first voyage, and partly through the results of recent observations of seamen and naturalists along the track of that navigator. Edward Heile, in Harpers Magazine for August, will relate the true story of "Magellan and the Pacific" as it appears in the light of these discoveries, and will be illustrated from old prints, and facsimiles of maps drawn by one of Magellan's companions will lend additional interest to the narrative.

Improvement

In my condition, my appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength
improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself in a sugar
woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life, and I cannot thank
you too much."

Brockway Centre, Mich., hereby certify
that the above statement, made by Mrs. J. A. Ayer, is true, and that we entirely and fully endorse it."—O. P.
Chamberlain, G. W. Waring, C. A.
Wells, Druggists.

"My brother, in England, was for a long time, unable to attend to his business, by reason of sores on his foot.
I sent him Ayer's Sarsaparilla and the testimonial it contained induced him to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using it a little while, he was cured, and in now
well man, working in a sugar mill
at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia."—
A. Attwell, Sarsaparilla, Ontario.
